Opposition to militarism and military training has injured the Wood candidacy in certain parts of the West. Recent pictures of the General are in civilian costume and all military titles were for a time banished from the Wood lit rature. Recently the use of "General" in referring to the candidate has been resumed. Under the army regulations an officer nay take off his uniform when on leave If the General makes specific request for the privilege. But to do this would embarrass the General, as it might be misconstrued in some quarters as an admission that the military uniform was a stumbling block in the gratification of the General's ambition to become a candidate for President. This authorized statement on the subject came from Wood headquarters in the Imperial Hotel here:

"At Gen. Wood's headquarters it was said that Gen. Wood was proud of the uniform, which had been immortalized, and that, without having heard from personally about the matter, they were sure he would continue to wear the miform during his period of leave." Gen. Wood's absence will begin on
